LeagueLink gets new name, new look

NIRSA's strategic alliance partner Active.com has announced that ActiveLeagues is the new name for its LeagueLink product. While the functionality of the product will not change, the new look and feel of ActiveLeagues offers NIRSA members easier navigation of the entire Active.com product line. NIRSA members can streamline the administration of their recreational sports programs with three technological tools:

- ActiveLeagues provides league administrators free online registration, scheduling, data management and communication.
- ActiveEvents offers event directors the same, along with tools to track and manage every aspect of an event.
- ActiveParks is a free feature developed by Active.com and the National Recreation and Park Association that provides professional exchanges, and a facilities inventory, as well as the online registration for classes, events and leagues.

Technology Internship program adopted by NIRSA Foundation

NIRSA member Nora Hudson said it best: "I like what NIRSA is doing with the advancement of technology and software," she mentioned at the recent School of Recreational Sports Management in Colorado. "But, I'm 'technology-illiterate' and don't know how to take advantage of it. How can I learn?"

Nora isn't the only technology neophyte. The Internet has dramatically changed the way we do business, and many recreational sports administrators find they must constantly learn the technology of this evolving medium on their own. However, thanks to a new initiative from the NIRSA Foundation, administrators in college and university settings may soon receive a helping hand in learning the latest in this technological medium, which will then boost

The following points may be helpful:

1. Your league and organization's homepage will not be affected by this name change. Your URL address will eventually be updated to the new URL root of "ActiveLeagues." Active.com will work individually with you to guarantee this happens successfully.
2. NIRSA members will receive personalized attention through a nationwide network of field representatives, account managers and service support.
3. Other companies may contend they have greater expertise in certain areas or in sports, but NIRSA and Active.com believe that no one can compete in the area of web applications and data management.

their department's use of this technology.

In July, the NIRSA Foundation adopted the Technology Internship program, sponsored by NIRSA's strategic alliance partner, Active.com. Interns will receive guidance in both the use and application of Internet technology from representatives at Active.com. Recreational sports administrators will provide the direction for technological expansion, and then the skilled interns will in turn assist their administrators with knowledge and technical training.

This fall, the internship program opens to a limited number of institutions and there are plans to expand in spring 2001. The program is not limited just to programs with leagues and

These sponsored sport events expand to 200 NIRSA Institutions this fall. Eligible institutions will receive information directly from Campus Concepts, Inc., NIRSA's marketing partner for sponsored sport events. For information about Flag Football regional and national tournaments, visit nirsa.org/nirsa17e.htm.

Super Hoops hiatus

National Media Group announced that last year's Super Hoops title sponsor, efollett.com, has withdrawn its support of the Super Hoops program due to its recent reorganization and budget cutbacks. While NMG intends to seek support from other potential sponsors, it is unlikely that funding for the 2000-2001 academic year can be secured at this late date. National Media Group intends to resell the program to a new sponsor for fall 2001. NIRSA may consider the endorsement of a 3-on-3 basketball program in the future, if another qualified sponsor be identified.

NIRSA Sports Boards Network

NIRSA Institutions that participate in the Sports Board Network will have the option to bring two additional boards to their campus, thus earning additional revenue and advertising opportunities. Institutions opting to post additional boards may also renew their contract for five years.

Active.com Blue Ribbon Committee appointed

With the recent formation of a Blue Ribbon Committee, ActiveLeagues is well on its way to becoming truly "NIRSA-built." In August, NIRSA President Bill Sells appointed 15 members to this committee with representatives from every region, varying institution sizes, and a broad scope of uses for the ActiveLeagues product. This NIRSA committee serves as a formalized communication channel to provide Active.com with input, ideas, and feedback—sustaining ActiveLeagues' status as the best web solution for NIRSA's members. Our thanks go to the tremendous number of volunteers who responded to serve. Term-lengths are one year, but half of the inaugural members were randomly appointed to stagger the two-year terms. Progress and communications will be reported in upcoming eFAST NEWS announcements and on nirsa.org.

NIRSA's Mission Statement

The mission of the National Intramural-Recreational Sports Association is to provide for the education and development of professional and student members and to foster quality recreational programs, facilities and services for diverse populations. NIRSA demonstrates its commitment to excellence by utilizing resources that promote ethical and healthy lifestyle choices.

NIRSA: Where? How? Why?

William T. Sells, NIRSA President, Ohio University

As I watched my grandson and his friends play on a sunny Florida beach, and I gazed at the calm ocean waves, I began thinking about NIRSA. The following questions came to mind...Where are we going? How do we get there? Why does it matter?

I recalled NIRSA's mission statement: "The mission of the National Intramural-Recreational Sports Association is to provide for the education and development of professional and student members and to foster quality recreational sports programs, facilities, and services for diverse populations. NIRSA demonstrates its commitment to excellence by utilizing resources that promote ethical and healthy lifestyle choices." In fulfilling this mission statement, again I thought: Where are we going? How do we get there? Why does it matter?

Where are we (NIRSA) going? As a result of NIRSA's very existence and the career choices and dedication of its members, our association has made a commitment to lead in the promotion of activities that develop positive attitudes and actions through the beneficial use of leisure time and to encourage healthy lifestyles of people at all ages, from early childhood through seniors. It is who we are and what we do.

How do we get there? In The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, Stephen Covey identifies "First Things First" as Habit III. As individuals and as an organization, we must determine "what matters most." We must protect ourselves, as Covey states, "from getting caught up in the thick of thin things by reacting to the 'little rocks' ... the distractions of those things that are of lesser importance. NIRSA must identify what is truly important to fulfill our mission; we must first focus on the big rocks, so there will then be time for the little rocks. Through effective planning, we attempt to minimize situations that are "important and urgent" (those situations and unexpected issues that become a crises as Covey calls Quadrant I in Habit III), and maximize situations that are important but not urgent (those situations and issues that we effectively planned for and address with foresight (Quadrant II in Habit III).

NIRSA accomplishes this in many ways through:

- Member input to identify what is important (what matters most)
- The development of committees and the tasks they are charged with—their responsibility of addressing (first things first)
- Synergy – not only through collaboration with each NIRSA member, but by forming partnerships with other recreation and health-related associations and other professionals in diverse environments.
- The NIRSA Board of Directors and your NIRSA National Center Staff.

As individuals, we accomplish this in our jobs by first identifying our roles and goals, then implementing them through effective weekly and long-range planning. We accomplish this in what we say and what we do ("walking the talk" according to Covey), in what we stand for, by our integrity, dedication, by our commitment to our profession, and our beliefs and our mission.

Why does it matter? It matters because we care about others. Our profession, by its very nature, is a caring and service-oriented profession. Because young people are asked to make a myriad of choices from an early age, it is our job to stress the choice of principles and positive values. We attempt to be good role models and mentors and to provide young people with the opportunity develop positive attitudes by promoting healthy lifestyles through the wholesome and worthwhile use of their leisure time. In our individual professions, and our professional association, we have the opportunity to influence those positive choices and to make a difference in their lives.

This is why it matters! It matters to my grandchildren, to all children, to all young and older adults, to everyone. Through NIRSA, each member of our profession has the exciting and challenging opportunity to have an enormously significant impact on society and the future of the 21st century. I am confident that NIRSA will embrace this opportunity.

As I watched the beautiful Florida sunset, I wondered, How will I accept this opportunity, challenge and responsibility? How will you?

Campuses gear up to promote alcohol awareness

During the week of October 15-21, college and university students on 3,000+ campuses nationwide will promote National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week by participating in events designed to reinforce personal responsibility with the consumption of alcohol. NIRSA has joined in this effort and urges members to showcase healthy lifestyles free from the abuse of alcohol.

"Participation in NCAAW helps college administrators launch or strengthen year-round prevention efforts. New students want to fit in. They often believe that everyone is getting drunk on a regular basis. We need to let them know that, based on campus research, the true norm is that more students make healthy choices than drink," said Todd Cotton, NIRSA's Natural High Program Coordinator.

For examples of ways to promote NCAAW, see model programs at the Inter-Association Task Force Web Site at www.iatf.org.

Kim Daley: Membership Services Coordinator

Kim Daley, 24, may be NIRSA's newly appointed Membership Services Coordinator, but she is not new to NIRSA. Since she was hired in 1997, Kim has worked here around her school (college) schedule. She's taken on the meticulous, detailed jobs of data entry for membership, coordinated mass mailings, entered data for Annual Conference registration and for the Recreational Sports Directory ... and anything else that has needed to be done ... always with an upbeat, positive attitude. She receives constant praise for her outstanding customer-service.

A philosophy major in her senior year at Oregon State University, Kim is a fan of all kinds of music and plays the piano. She is not only interested in making a difference in the lives of those around her, but elsewhere in the world. Last summer she spent her time as a Youth Activities Counselor coordinating volunteers who were working in the heat on a Hopi Indian reservation in Arizona. A summer before, she went with a group from her First Christian Church to the mountains of Quito (the capital of Ecuador in South America) to help build a school, and this summer, she's spending a month as part of a work crew building houses for Habitat for Humanity in Botswana, in southeast Africa. It is swampland located in "one of the largest inland deltas of the world" at the mouth of the Okavango River.

A native Oregonian, she was born in Albany, located 11 miles from Corvallis where the NNC is located.

"Kim wants to be helpful to others," says her grandmother June Daley. "We are very proud of Kim and of the kind of person she's grown up to be."

So are we at NIRSA!
